NSA and ASA Are Your Advocates

The Nebraska Soybean Association (NSA), a state affiliate of the American Soybean Association (ASA) work together to be a your collective voice of 25, 000 U.S. soybean producers that are members of the Association. By making the choice to become a member of your state soybean organization, you make that collective voice even more powerful.

The NSA and ASA is your advocate in Washington D.C., on issues such as biodiesel legislation, farm policy, transportation infrastructure and international market access. This important policy work is paid for by your voluntary membership dues. Soybean checkoff dollars cannot be used to influence policy — your membership dues can.

The Soybean Association's commitment to policy development begins with the grower-members. They elect state Board members and voting delegates who establish the policy goals for your organization.

For more than 85 years, ASA has been working on behalf of its members to build demand, enhance profit opportunities and protect the soybean industry. The Soybean Association is proud to represent its soybean grower members.
